Problems with the audio sample? Vamo Alla Flamenco, Vamo'alla Flamenco, or Vamo' all Flamenco is a theme from Final Fantasy IX written by Nobuo Uematsu. Vamo Alla Flamenco is an image of Vamos Alle, Flamenco, a Spanish expression meaning free let's go, flamenco. A common idiom in southern Spain, the name may refer to the melodies of the Spanish feel. The guitar in this type of music is called flamenco guitar or Guitarra Flamenca, and the guitarist at these dance parties is called flamenco (a). Speaking to Vamos amenko Flamenco, guests ask the guitarist to speed up the tempo or beat. Vamo Alla Flamenco includes in its harmonious chord center the famous flamenco guitar theme, La Malague and shares its diatonic scale E-minor. The main theme is taken from the traditional Melody of La Folia with its distinctive flattened leading triad of note in the fourth bar (G-major triad in A-minor Vamo' Alla Flamenco). La Folia can be heard on several other tracks in Final Fantasy IX, including Black Mage Village and Vivi's Theme. Final Fantasy IX's Edit Source game performance was included in the original soundtrack as the seventh track of the album's first disc. He plays during a mini-game sword fight between Blank and zidan closer to the beginning of the game, and when playing Chocobo Hot and Cold.
